CITIES RECORD SATISFACTION WITH MANAGERS

Survey Shows Nine Out of 10 Retain New Form of Government After Trial

· UNUSUAL CONDITIONS CAUSE SOME CHANGES

> Dropped by Vote of Citizens in Only Four Cases-Many Mayors Favor Second Test

To learn what has been the success of the city manager system and what it offers toward improvement of urban government, The Christian Science Monitor has sent inquiries to executives of all American cities where the plan has been tried, and has received detailed replies from more than half of them. These have been analyzed and interpreted by a staff writer in a series of articles of which the fol-lowing is the fourth.

By TULLY A. NETTLETON City managership may please some cities all the time, and may please all cities some of the time, but it cannot please all the cities all the time. There have been enough abandonments to prove that. Yet there are interesting sidelights on the managerial theory, not altogether to its discredit, discovered by a study of the various local conditions under which many of the repudiations of the plan took place.

It is surprising, in a stack of letters from the present mayors or city clerks of municipalities which once had the manager plan but returned to council or commission government, to find many of these executives saying their cities would be better administered if a manager were again employed.

One community which tried and repealed the manager plan by ordinance later adopted a manager charter. This was Johnson City. Tenn. Others say they do not call the plan a failure but consider it was unsuitable to the size or political nature of the community.

In another case, that of Akron, O., the only city of more than 100,000 population that has tried and changed away from managerial government, the change was modification rather than abandonment. The offices of manager and mayor were combined, in effect making the managership a political post.

Nine Out of 10 Satisfied There are 44 municipalities in the United States and Canada which have tried the manager plan or something they called the manager plan but do not have it now. This, as compared with the 381 municipalities operating under managerial systems, shows that approximately nine of every 10 cities that have used this form of government have it has been found, on whether the plan is adopted by charter, requiring a vote of the people to change adopted here at one of the most imback, or whether it is inaugurated portant prohibition meetings ever merely by ordinance, subject to re-peal at the whim of the council that passed it or of some succeeding council. # COURTS' DELAYS DECLARED DUE TO LEGISLATORS

Next Move for Speed Is Up to Lawmakers, Says Taft and Wickersham

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU WASHINGTON-The responsibility of legislators in speeding up American justice, declared now to be encumbered with "shocking delays," was stressed by Chief Justice Taft and George W. Wickersham, president of the American Law Institute, at the institute's session here. The institute is engaged in preparing a restatement of civil and criminal law. Following the addresses, Silas Strawn, head of the American Bar Association, explained orally that attention has centered on Congress in view of bills pending before it which would curtail the powers of judges. The bar association opposes these bills. Furthermore, Mr. Strawn said, bills advocated by the association now before the Senate Judiciary Committee, have met with delays which he hopes will be ended.

Both Mr. Taft and Mr. Wickersham indicated that the next move for remedies of existing evils in the American criminal system should come from the legislators, either in Washington or the states.

The delays and the shocking miscarriages of justice which characterize so much of the administration of criminal justice in this country and which are so notably lacking in culture of Massachuseits, proposes England, Canada and in other English-speaking communities, are di-rectly chargeable to the legislative

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

SIR WILLIAM HENRY CLARKE has been appointed High Com-missioner for Great Britain in Canada, thus putting into effect certain conclusions arrived at by the Imperial Conference of 1926 as regards a system of communication and consultation between Londor and the Dominions.

These conclusions embodied "the desirability of developing a system of personal contact, both in Lon-don and in the Dominion capitals." This, however, will not replace direct communication from Govern-ment to Government "and the special arrangements which have been in force singe 1918 for communication between prime ministers." .......

State to Aid City to Farm Move Again

Unique "Travel Bureau" to Be Enlarged This Year, Dr. Gilbert Says

Instead of sending all the fresh ountry produce to the city, Dr. A. Gilbert, Commissioner of Agrito send the city to the country produce.

It is much better, in my opinion, Dr. Gilbert says, "to feed the sum-ner people with fresh vegetables, eggs and milk right from the farm, than it is to send this same farm produce into the cities or to the seahore and have it eaten by the same people, after passing through the hands of many middlemen, and increasing greatly in price while it loses greatly in quality."

Lists of pleasant country pla s, where even a whole summer can be spent at moderate cost, have been prepared by the department for the past several years and the practice is to be continued this year. According to reports, however, although the lists have grown steadily, never has the supply of places been equal to the demand for them.

This unique "local travel bureau," Dr. Gilbert explained, was originally intended to help out the farm home finances, and increase the sometimes slender revenues, at the same time giving city residents restful sur-

KELLOGG PEACE PROJECT WINS BRITISH BACKING

Sympathetic Acceptance of American Thesis Seen as Probable

LORD GREY GIVES IT UNQUALIFIED WELCOME

American Proposals for Peace Not Seen as Hostile to the League of Nations

BY WIRELESS FROM MONITOR BUREAU LONDON-The representative of The Christian Science Monitor is in a position to affirm that in all probability Great Britain's official decision upon Frank B. Kellogg's outlawry of war proposal, now held in abeyance pending the return of the Foreign Minister, Sir Austen Chamberlain, from the continent and his communication with the Dominions, will be a qualified but sympathetic acceptance of the American thesis. There will be certain precise, innocuous defintions, but none so sharp perhaps as those

London newspapers pay compara tively little attention to the speech of Viscount Grey of Fallodon before the League of Nation's parliamentary committee in the House of Commons on "The American Peace Proposals." And yet Lord Grey's utterances, the Monitor representative learns, are most significant and veritably reflect the views of a certain important government spokesman, whose identity at the moment cannot be dis-

Nevertheless because of official British silence and world-wide wonderment as to what Downing Street fered olive branch, the fact that this notable spokesman's views, expressed just before Lord Grey's speec's coincide with it, gives the latter's words a super-importance and gravity apparently not realized at the moment on this side of the Atlantic. Speaking of the direction that there was reason to hope the discussion would take, Lord Grey said that for himself, his own attitude come to United States initiative. There was no question whatever, he said, that Mr. Kellogg's proposals were advanced in all sincerity without the smallest arrière-pensée. The United States had less than any roundings and wholesome food.

The project has since grown to be one of the Department of Agriculture's major service. Numbers of cases are known where the money received from summer boarders has sire for world peace and not by any narrow view of separate American

I have said already that such provisions as this would not impose any obligations by the terms of the American pact to take action against any power which broke it. And this will have to be clearly understood. I imagine that should any power break the pact now proposed and go to war with another power which is a signatory of the pact, the attitude of all the other signatories, including the United States, would be one of at least benevolent neutrality toward any power which is injured by the breaking of the treaty, or toward any power or powers which had to resort

OTHING comparable to the EDEN AUTO-MATIC LIGHTING FIXTURE built. It's almost as flexible as the human arm. Construction of the head permits movement of the telescopic arm in horizontal or vertical directions-up or down, to right or to left. Cut showing lamp in various positions illustrates movement in horizontal direction. Four drawings of the head with cut-off telescopic arm illustrates vertical movement of the head.

Most Ingenious

It's the only "self positioning" light built. No nuts, no bolts, no screws to adjust. Push the EDEN AUTOMATIC LIGHTING FIXTURE where you want it—it "Stays Put." Telescopic arm can be extended 11 feet, making possible directing of a light to any point in a 22 foot hemisphere. Light eliminates all shadows.

Also a Trouble Lamp

By snapping a conveniently located lock spring, the lamp shade and double ball and socket joint may be removed and 60 inches of flexible cord, running through the telescopic arm and attached to a ball bearing spring controlled reel in the head, may be withdrawn from the maximum 11-foot extension. Los Angeles to Be Used in Experiments—Seeking Safer Navigation

Plans which it is hoped will make aerial navigation far safer and more practical with the dirigible type of lighter-than-air craft as compared with airplanes, are being matured at Lakehurst, N. J., by American naval officers, and some revolutionary developments in this phase of aviation are ready to undergo tests at the field of the Naval Air Station there.

These developments include a new type of mooring mast—mobile, tele-scopic and collapsible, and so designed it will require a minimum but that is a very important unit. Necessity for the successful export merchandiser to vary his product and methods to suit the individual country with which he hopes to do business was emphasized by Henry H. Morse, chairman of the Boston (Mass.) Export Round Table, He pointed out that with federal and other agencies ready to help, there is slight need to send a personal representative to the new market for correct information.

He declared import duties of various countries were not a serious problem, adding: "They serve principally to keep out jimcrack mer-chandise without seriously affecting the market for goods having intrinsic value. "In general," he concluded, "we may say-first make the merchandise fit the market, second make the price fit the merchandise and conform to the accepted methods of doing business in that market, and last make a real sales effort of the truly United States type, and the amount of foreign business that can be done will surprise all but the most optimistic.

Increase in the number of American exporters since the World War has intensified the problem of delivering merchandise to the buyer in good condition, the result of efficient packing. This was explained to the merchandising session by

Paul L. Grady, secretary-treasurer of the National Association of Wooden Box Manufacturers, Chicago. Mr. Grady emphasized the impor-tance of proper packing if American exporters are to keep in the good graces of their foreign customers. "A single exporter, whose packing practices are bad, may have a serious effect upon the sales of other American exporters who are endeavoring to sell in the same markets, although they may deal in entirely different He referred to the automobile perhaps the most common example of how merchandise may be knocked down for shipment, to conserve OUTLOOK FOUND space. Thus packed, a motorcar occupies but a fraction of the space necessary for stowing an assembled car, he pointed out.

Opposition to federal encroach-ment on the field of marine insurance was voiced by J. B. Levinson, president of an insurance company in San Francisco, Calif. He declared there has been built up an American in surance market, independent of for-eign influence, fully able to provide indemnity for American citizens. ### Radio Notes

CERENADES are usually rather short pieces, but the "Serenade for Two Violins and Piano," Op. 92, by Sinding, is an exception to the rule as will be learned by those who listen-in to the "At Home With the Masters" program, to be radiocast by all of the associated ing System at 10:30 o'clock, eastern standard time, Friday night, April 27. This Serenade is to be played by Gregory Besrodny and Victor Bay, violinists, and Alexander Semmler, pianist Another interesting number to be heard in this program is a special arrangement of two movements from Dvořák's "Terzetto" for clarinet, Who violin and viola. Guy d'Isere, who

Radio Makes Home Political Center

Various Issues of This Year's Campaign Presented to Entire Nation

Every home equipped with radio has become a modern substitute for the old meeting house. All kinds of topics are discussed by competent speakers. Carrier waves sizzle with knowledge as well as classical and jazz music. This summer the parlor, in effect. will become the ante-room on the side of the platform of the national conventions, and everyone can occupy what is virtually a seat beside the chairman at the subsequent great campaign rallies of the major political parties. Torchlight parades and the other noisy features which hitherto have been so picturesque a part of campaigning may be missingbut so will the befuddling of issues that distractions encourage. Radio forces an appeal to the intellect and not so much to the emotions, thus altering the character of campaigns for the better. Radio leads to an enlightened public opinion, with consequent advantage in the interest of the common weal. The entire nation will be at the conventions, thanks to the radiocasting hook-up. From the time the nominations are made until final results are announced on election night the family can be present at the principal rallies of the big parties and hear their leaders expound the various sides of each controver-

Nations, like individuals, are sure to lose their objectivity, if not their tempers, as soon as a controversy becomes serious," he said. "Some-how we must bring into the definition the idea of some outside legal standard. We must substitue the judgment of a jury of peers for the individual decision of the individual nation. Unless we substitute international judgment for national impulse, we must expect the same confusion in the future as marked the World War in which each nation was quite simply convinced that it was fighting a war of defense. Home and School Activities in Teaching Overlapping, Dr. Hill Declares

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU NEW YORK-Sympathy, imagination, and the ability to see things from the child's standpoint are indispensable qualities for "parents who understand," according to Dr. Patty Smith Hill, of Teachers College, Columbia University, who presided at

Dr. Hill declared that parents who aspire to understand their child must learn not only from books and lectures, but must make a study of their child and his problems and acquire wisdom. They must realize that the concrete situations which arise in the home present opportuni-ties for training the child's habits that the Sheppard-Towner maternity for informal learning which the home and infancy act and the proposed offers is often more valuable than the school as the "two great institutions of learning for the child," and declared that at the present time there is too much overlapping in their activities. "Schools and teachers are trying to teach what the home and parents should teach," she said.

SHOULD BE REGULATED

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU WASHINGTON - Motorbus transportation has reached maturity and deserves to be put on an equality with railroads and trolley cars under federal regulation. This is the conclusion of the Interstate Commerce which recommends Commission enactment by Congress of regulatory laws based on the commission's own investigation. Buses for passengers should be regulated, it is stated, but it is still held too early to regulate lines carrying express or freight. Bus transportation is a great and growing form of communication, the commission holds. It should now acept the responsibilities which its elder brothers, steam and trolley roads, as well as water carriers, have long known.

SHORE-LINE ROAD PROPOSED

SAN FRANCISCO - A shore-line boulevard 100 feet wide from this city to Monterey is being discussed by the governing bodies of San Francisco, San Mateo, and Santa Cruz Counties. The highway would pass through some of the finest scenery in California, it is said, would cost upward of $5,300,000, and would re-quire 15 years to build.

His sonata is in one movement of continuously played, either way we like to think; although it proves rather unmarked and undistinguished onsider its structure. It clings pertinaceously to the heroic and shrinks abhorrently from the sentimental and the humorous. It is surcharged, fine, with something much akin to monotony. It represents cogitation instead of meditation and it fits, accordingly, into the present-day musical trend. It affects the classic and avoids the romantic. It closes, let us say, not a cynical, but an uncompromising, severity. And after that, it strikes upon the ear with a sound of its own; which indicates that the composer has within him the power of independent utterance, whether he happens in this particular case to achieve a high communication or not. Sharp-cor nered melody, broken rhythm and a generally energetic style are char acteristics of his. A musician of the Mexican school, he may yet reveal something about his country and his audience; and all the more, perchance, is he likely to do it, because invents his tunes, disdaining

Rightfield Post Doubtful

The four pitchers are Palmer. L. O. Heideman '29, W. L. Heilerman '29 and Gerald W. McAleece '30. Because of his ability with the bat. Palmer will be used in the outfield whenever he is not pitching. Hellerman is the only left-hander in the quartet. These four are all steady, experienced boxmen. At right field there is the most doubt as to who will win the assignment, especially when Palmer is pitching. McAleece is a good prospect when he is not pitching. Harry Kent '29 works there sometimes, while Paul A. Redman '30 and J. S. Miller '29 are also out for the post.

Syracuse Baseball Coach Handicapped

Adverse Weather, Graduations and Ineligibilities Hinder Coach L. F. Carr

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A combination of adverse weather conditions, green material, and ineligibility have been a great handleap to the Syracuse University baseball team thus far this season, and Coach Lewis F. Carf is not very optimistic over the prospects. Graduation took many of the best men at the end of last season, so Coach Carr figured on developing around the veterans that were left, and filling in the gaps with the best of the green men, but in January practically all of the good men were lost by ineligibility, with the result that the Orange coach is faced with a very weak infield, and a more or less mediocre outfield, W. S. Callahan '29, the man whom Coach Carr had groomed to fill the second base position left by V. A. Hanson, W. L. Whik '29L, and J. F. Harrington '29, were among the best men lost because of scholarship, Capt, W. C. Elseman '29, the star third baseman, has gone into the professional game with the New York York Yorkeys was taken lost to the teat teat. 29, the star third baseman, has gone into the professional game with the New York Yankees, so is also lost to the Orange. On the pitching staff, George Miner Jr. '29 is the only man of experience upon whom the coach can rely, although Charles E. Cummings '30, a lefthander, is showing some promise.

RAIL STOCKS CONTINUE TO LEAD MARKET

Carriers in Strong Demand at Rising Prices-Tone Buoyant

NEW YORK, April 26 (A)—Railroad shares held the center of the stage in today's stock market, practically all active issues mounting to new high levels for the year on gains ranging from fractions to 8 points.

Industrials pointed upward after an early period of irregularity. Trading was again in large volume, total sales crossing 2,300,000 shares before the end of the third hour.

The brisk demand for the rails took place in the face of another noor place in the face of another poor freight car loadings report, receiving its chief impetus from the rather gen-eral belief that an agreement on east-ern railroad consolidations finally had been reached by leading executives. St. Louis Southwestern and Lehigh Valley, each up 8 points, led the advance, Jersey Central and Union Pacific climbed about 6 points each, and Wabash, Chicago Northwestern and a suppose of theory naved by the search of others moved up 2 to nearly

General Railway Signal and Gold Dust railied briskly at the expense of an over-crowded short interest.

The closing was strong. Vigorous constructive operations broke out in copper, oil and local gas shares, along with a number of other stocks in which investors are interested. Individual blocks ranging from 11,600 to 30,000 shares changed hands in the oil group, elevating a number to new group, elevating a number to new highs for the year. Consolidated Gas rose 6½, American Express 5¾ and International Nickel and Greene-Cananea Copper 4. Profit taking re-duced extreme advances in some of the rails, Lehigh Valley settling back to 111. Total sales approximated 4,000,000

SCHWAB SEES IMPROVEMENT

NEW YORK, April 26—Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, sailing on the S. S. Berengaria, says marked improvement in the steel industry has been noticed in the last few months. He says Bethlehem's gross tonnage this month and next will be the highest in years and earnings will show improvement, but not as much as might be expected owing to low steel prices. He expects a favorable year for business.

CHICAGO STEEL BUYING QUIETER

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU CHICAGO, April 26—New business in finished steel, especially the heavy lines, continues so light that the curlines, continues so light that the current 95 per cent steel making rate for the Chicago district is endangered.

In the last few days bookings have been scarcely 50 per cent of shipments, a condition that will rapidly wear away backlogs, restore prompt delivery, and compel some capacity to be dropped.

consumption has not tapered off to Consumption has not tapered off to the extent buying has. Consumers generally are working off material specified over the last 30 to 45 days, and because the price situation is increasingly favorable to them, are not replacing it. Sheets are decidedly weak, particularly to the South and Southwest, and the preferred list of users getting plates and shapes at 1.95 cents instead of 2 cents is broadening.

Weakness is also apparent in wide strip, which is shaded $1 to $2 a ton, and in cold strip the 2.75 cent Cleveland market may force revision here. Automotive interests are taking a trifle less of these products, and their support is necessary to a strong market.

Concessions are reported in wire nails, the $2.70 per 100 pound keg price being bettered $1. About half of the 120 passenger cars About half of the 120 passenger cars ordered by the New York Central will be built in—this district. Nearly 10,000 tons of track fastenings have been distributed here by the Pennsylvania.

The revised quotation of $30 to $32. Birmingham, for east iron water pipe derives strength from the refusal of domestic makers to go below $30 in bidding on 11,980 tons at Detroit. The low foreign bid was equivalent to $29.08. Birmingham.

Lake Eric iron has been offered at 50

$29.08. Birmingham.

Lake Eric iron has been offered at 50 cents to $1 a ton under the $18.50. Chicago furnace, price, it is reported, but sales have been light. Spot sales of northern iron are heavier. Dealer covering operations have added strength to scrap prices.

Although a steel works blast furnace stack has been lighted at Gary, one is slated to be blown out this week, having 29 out of 36 stacks active.

RECOVER SECURITY LOSSES

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT

SAN FRANCISCO — The California
State Corporation Department recovered $379.510 in cash for careless investors in questionable securities who were, in most cases, financially unable to bring civil suit for the recovery of their funds. This was revealed by a report of J. M. Friedlander, Commissioner of Corporations, covering the fiscal year ending Feb. 29.
Mr. Friedlander's department authorized the sale of securities amounting to more than $1,000,000,000 during the year.

Girl Rescues Deer

MISS A. H. W. of Brooklyn writes an interesting account of the rescue of a deer by a young girl. The animal had fallen on the ice and was unable to arise. Cautious as she was courageous, Virginia first tied one end of a rope around a tree and the other about herself. Then venturing out on the none-too-thick ice, she pushed the exhausted deer to shore,

What Price Expediency!

FEW days ago the National Republican Club took the newspapers by storm with the announcement of its plan to recommend a plank in the national platform advocating repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The news was spread lavishly upon the front pages, for it appeared that the issue was to be squarely put to the Republican Party, whether it should declare emphatically against prohibi-tion or earnestly for it. It offered a twofold opportunity. The wets would be able to show their strength-or perhaps their weaknessand the party would be called upon to take an honest and outspoken position.

The project flopped. It was weakness, not strength, which the wets showed when the decision to submit the resolution to the club's membership came up for vote. It was tabled.

Only one question, and that passingly unimportant, has been settled. It is that, contrary to the sponsors of the repeal resolution, there is no "irrepressible" demand within the National Republican Club for the overthrow of prohibition. As the New York Evening Post observes, the tabling of the resolution "is a decided defeat for the wets.'

A larger issue remains to be met. That those who would abandon the Eighteenth Amendment have in this instance disclosed their impotence is but a preliminary victory for the dry forces. The wets were defeated in New York, but the Republican Party is still called upon to take an honest and outspoken position with relation to prohibition and its enforcement. The call comes from the people of the whole Nation to whom prohibition is unquestionably an uppermost concern. If there is no strength to the demand for repeal of the amendment, there is strength to the growing demand for the continuance of the amendment vigorously and sympathetically enforced.

The fallacious claims of political expediency have too long dulled and debilitated the national elections. The maneuvering of party politicians to evade the prohibition issue is a bald nullification of the right of the people to a free expression of opinion on this subject, even as apathetic enforcement is a nullification of the Constitution itself. The wets have found their call for repeal a futile gesture, and therein the drys are left with an opportunity which should not be neglected.

For a Better Understanding

STUDY of the agenda of the convention of A the National League of Women Voters, held in Chicago, compels the observation that it is more comprehensive than any that has previously been outlined for discussion by any organization of citizens and voters comprising men exclusively, or both men and women collectively. There is evidenced, unquestionably, a determination to gain, through an unbiased and unprejudiced study of the political, social and industrial issues which are attracting the interest and attention of the American people, a better understanding than has formerly been gained of their true import and significance.

Of course, it is realized that no lay or voluntary organization of voters, either women or men, can formulate and enunciate party platforms. This prerogative is vested in the representatives of the people in state and national conventions. But with a better understanding of the needs of the people and a clearer realization of the necessity of providing adequate safeguards for the protection of individual and community rights, there will be increasing pressure brought to bear upon those who write party platforms and nominate candidates for public office to act conformably to the expressed wishes and convictions of those who have the deciding voice in the elections. Those who are prone to complain of the arbitrary and often unwise domination by leaders in party councils seem often to lose sight of the important fact that they themselves, either inadvertently or negligently, have failed to indicate, by instructions given or by resolutions adopted in gatherings similar to that held in Chicago, their own preferences or conclusions. Thus those who go with warrants authorizing them to represent the people of a district or state do not, in fact, represent anyone but themselves and the inner circle or clique to which they belong. In the Chicago meeting a number of vitally important problems were discussed. Expert advice was given and listened to. The gathering was described as political, but also as nonpartisan. The council was a purely deliberative one. It is fortunate that thousands, and perhaps millions, of American women voters have thus far refrained from allying themselves with any political party. In the forthcoming election these independent voters will hold the balance of power, with strength sufficient to insure the election of legislators and executives who are committed to the theories and practices of government which they approve. But the independent voters, whether women or men, will not be alone in their undertaking. Among the adherents of the political party organizations, if the issue is joined on the question of prohibition enforcement, for instance, there are legions of voters who will cast their ballots for those candidates committed and pledged to a support of the law. This is evident in advance of the meeting of the nominating conventions, and the fact is so patent that it cannot fail to have a determining influence both at Kansas City and Houston. Despite all that is said to the contrary, party leaders on both sides are too wise in discerning and interpreting the signs of the times to imagine that the wives and mothers of America will so far forget their own interests and the welfare of their homes and children as ever to vote in favor of any compromise with the liquor power. They know it in all its hideousness and wickedness as an enemy which must be allowed no quarter.

Another Handclasp Across the Sea

WHEN one small organization conceives and puts into operation a plan to bring the people of two languages into closer and more sympathetic relationship, it performs an outstanding service to the world. Such a service is now being rendered by the Rotary Club of Pawtucket, R. I., a unit in that great organization which has as its sixth object "the advancement of understanding, good will and international peace."

This club has caused to be prepared a series of ten articles concerning the larger cities and industrial centers of France. They have been written by a well-known traveler and observer. and they contain interpretative illustrations by a prominent French artist. They are intended to give the English-speaking people in the United States and Canada an intimate picture not only of the places described, but also of the rank and file of the French people as they move about in their social, educational and industrial activities. Especial emphasis is placed upon the last named, of which the club says: "However diverse are the political and cultural interests of the European nations, they are finding in their industrial needs a common meeting ground."

There are said to be 2173 rotary clubs with a membership of 113,192 in the United States and Canada, and it is the hope and expectation of the Pawtucket unit to place this series of articles in the hands of practically all of them. These articles, each complete in itself and each bearing a message of good will, cannot fail to bring the two groups into a more intimate and sympathetic relationship. The movement is more than a gesture-it is a warm, friendly handclasp across the sea.

The Nationalists Approach Peking

THE Nationalist armies of Gen. Chiang Kaishek, driving up from the south, and of Gen. Feng Yu-hsien, closing in from the west, are said to have effected a junction in their drive on Peking. A little over eighteen months ago the southerners began their victorious drive out of Kwantung Province. Their objective then was Peking. They gained, last spring, to the Yangtze Valley, and established a capital in the city of Hankow. But last year's drive stopped at the Yangtze. The effort of M. Borodin and his Communist satellites to usurp control of the Kuomintang Party resulted in a split in the Nationalist régime. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek turned aside from his drive against the North to purge the Kuomintang of this "alien influence." Under his leadership the moderate wing set up its capital in Nanking and from that city waged war upon the Hankow Communists. With the expulsion of Borodin from the country and the collapse of the power of Hankow the Nationalist Party was reconstituted as a bona fide Chinese organization having as its purpose the establishment of a united, democratic government in the country. The new drive against Peking is the first step in the program of that reconstituted party.

It is not likely that a political or economic millennium will be ushered in when the Nationalists reach Peking. But the significance of that event will, none the less, be very great. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is no less a patriot and a Nationalist because he has rejected the uncompromising violence of the Communists for a more moderate program of negotiations. The powers, with little question, look upon the present Nationalist leadership with much greater favor than they did upon that of a year ago. But that fact, despite the accusations of the Soviets, is no indication that the present leadership is any the less loyal to the interests of China. In fact, at no other time since the passing of Dr. Sun Yat-sen has the control of the party been so fully in Chinese hands. Meanwhile a new attitude of friendliness has developed between the Chinese and the foreign residents in China. New tolerance has begun to appear on both sides. The antiforeign agitation of a year ago has disappeared. With the Nationalists in Peking it is altogether likely that a new period of good will and understanding between China and the powers may begin. And, more important, China, under a moderate and more unified leadership, may undertake that domestic work of housecleaning that has been so long and so unfortunately

The Northern Rail Merger

THE glamour attached to the efforts of the eastern rail presidents to agree to a plan of merging these lines has temporarily taken the spotlight off the proceedings in the Northwest, where a rail merger which will bring together the greatest assemblage of rail mileage in North America under one management has reached the point that hearings have been concluded by the Interstate Commerce Commission and briefs are being submitted.

The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railways, which seek to consolidate, now control other roads, notably the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, which would establish a system of 27,000 miles of line. The merger is a renewal of the proposal in 1901 when the Northern Securities Company was ordered dissolved under the stringent anti-trust acts.

Refuting published statements to the effect that the patrons of these lines would not benefit from the grouping of the northerns, executives of these lines claim emphatically that savings in charges would accrue to shippers if the merger were consummated. Public sentiment in the territory served by these roads was found to be largely noncommittal by a representative of The Christian Science Monitor prior to the opening of hearings by the commerce commission. But diligent efforts by the northern lines resulted in obtaining the concurrence of a number of representative trade associations in the Northwest, although the sentiment was by no means unanimous.

An important factor in the case is the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad. Although many feel that it would have been better if its line from St. Paul to the coast had never been built, the fact remains that it now exists. Moreover, it ably serves a growing populace and is an important part of the merger discussion. From the standpoint of a known community of interests, the two northerns can muster many effective points in support of their application. But it is generally assumed that the commerce commission, if it follows its regular precedent, will refuse permission to merge until either a change is made in the existing laws or a general plan for rail merging can be worked out.

Can Prosperity Be Legislated?

UESTIONINGS as to the possibility of a substantial recession in American manufacturing and commercial activities, based largely on an increase in the number of unemployed workers, have prompted numerous suggestions for federal legislation, or governmental action, that it is hoped will prevent a return to the conditions of 1920. When the post-war inflation was at its peak in 1919, warning voices urged that the era of artificially high prices could not reasonably be expected to endure. Little attention was paid to these protests, and seemingly no effort was made to avoid the consequences of industrial production everywhere overrunning demand. Had there been an earlier recognition of factors unfavorable to an indefinite continuance of "boom" conditions, it is probable that many of the worst effects of the 1920 collapse might have been avoided.

That in anticipation of another period of slackening sales of merchandise which will limit production and distribution, business men should seek to find a remedy through some form of legislation or of governmental aid, is rather discouraging. During the past eight years the urgent demands of the American farmers for congressional aid in restoring at least a measure of prosperity to agriculture have been met with a remarkably unanimous response from manufacturing, banking, financial and other business interests to the effect: "You cannot make men prosperous by legislation. You cannot change economic laws by an act of Congress." Yet no sooner is there a hint of a possible business reaction than the representatives of various industrial and commercial interests come forward with suggestions for doing something about the situation by passing more laws.

The farmers may be quite mistaken in believing that legislation can effect any permanent improvement in their economic conditions, but in view of the claims of political partisans that manufacturing, railway transportation and banking prosperity has to a large extent been due to legislation enacted on their behalf, it is not surprising that the farmer should incline to seek help in the same direction.

Canadian Radio Control

S RECENTLY announced in the Dominion Parliament by the responsible minister, Canada is considering the feasibility of establishing radiocasting under national ownership, control and operation as it is in Great Britain. So far, Canadian radiocasting has been left to private enterprise. The Government has confined itself to regulating the number of stations by annual license.

It is being impressed upon the Federal Administration, however, that radiocasting in Canada may go the way of motion picture production, unless it is taken over by the state. Private stations in Canada have no such source of revenue as the larger radiocasting stations in the United States to pay for entertainment up to the desired standard of excellence. Unless radio listeners in Canada are given at least as satisfactory service by Canadian radiocasting stations, they will naturally tune in to United States stations. They would still be just as free to listen to entertainment from stations to the south, but it is believed that Canadian radiocasting could be much improved under state enterprise. There would seem to be no insuperable obstacle to the proposed policy. Canadian stations have been limited in number with considerable foresight by the Dominion Administration. The demand for private stations is increasing, however. One of the latest, and the largest in Canada, is owned by liquor interests. After observing the confusion arising from private radiocasting enterprise in the United States, Canada has no desire to become involved in a similar problem: nor can the people of Canada look with equanimity on the possibility of radiocasting gradually passing into the hands of private monopoly. The comparative success of the British Broadcasting Commission, under the national policy of public ownership, has much to commend it to Canada.

Editorial Notes

It is seldom that one hears of naval ships being put to so useful and pacific a purpose as that recently performed by vessels of the Canadian and United States navies. The huge herds of Pacific seals are on their annual migration to the Pribiloff Islands, and under international treaty they are being convoyed by war vessels, which see that they come to no harm on their long journey.

Word comes from Hong Kong that the native Chinese are to have a baseball league and that five teams have already been organized to play for its championship this summer. As the Canton Chinese also have a league, China will soon be having its own "World Series."

The ambitious speaking program outlined for President Coolidge indicates that since the White House spokesman has been allowed to lapse into innocuous desuetude the man at the wheel of the ship of state has become almost loquacious.

boulevards. I wheedle my way through the throng Seated on a pliable stool a man is playing a portable harmonium. Another is playing an accordion. A drum and cymbals are close by, but nobody is for the moment manipulating them. Standing in front of this little group is a Paris girl—typically neat. She has a piece of music in her hand, but she does not glance at it. She knows well the words and the air. Her voice is raised not un-

The crowd listens in respectful silence and pays no heed to the roaring traffic of the principal thoroughfare. Presently she gives the signal for the crowd to join in the refrain. Clumsily, but lustily, men and women, old and young, sing in chorus. It is the latest popular song which they are glad to learn. One cannot say that it is a very good song, but on the whole it is cheerful in its sentiment. Its motif seems to be that if you don't trouble trouble, trouble won't trouble you. Then she takes up copies of the song and for a few minutes plies a lively trade. In the midst of the noise and bustle of daily activities a few Parisians have, in their simple way, found surcease for a few minutes in song.

+ + + By the Gare Saint-Lazare—the great railway station. On a stone bench are gathered strange-looking folk. The women wear great shawls covering their heads, or for headgear they have gay-colored kerchiefs. The men have unusual casquettes pulled over their eyes. A few children are playing about their feet. They look out timidly on the animated scene. They seem to be surprised and a little awed. Certainly they are not of Paris. They are obviously somewhat apprehensive of Paris.

Their appearance speaks of poverty. Yet there is a gleam of hope in their eyes. Who are they? They are emigrants from the countries of central Europe. Passing through Paris, they are waiting for some formalities to be fulfilled. This is a halting place in the course of a great adventure. Arrangements have been made for them. Their tinerary has been determined. They are shepherded to their far-off destination.

Soon they will be put in the train for Cherbourg where they will find a great Emigrant's Home opened to them for the night. In the morning they will embark on a transatlantic steamer, and they will be carried westward to the land in which they will begin all things again. Hope gleams in their eyes. + + +

In the little garden square. The morning housework has been done. The marketing is ended. The housewives have brought their infants to this city square. They are knitting away briskly as though much depended upon the speed with which they accomplished their task.

Long years ago, when Paris was stirring to revolution, those same women—or so it would seem—were knitting in the public gardens. Mighty events were being prepared, or were passing around them, but they, as Charles Dickens has described in his "Tale of Two Cities," were knitting away. They are still knitting, for customs, it would seem, never change in France, exactly as they were knitting a hundred and fifty years ago.

The tiny tots are tracing geometric patterns in the paths, or are building up miniature mounds of sand. The oun is shining, the grass is green, the trees are putting forth shoots, the inevitable statue shines white, the pigeons strut around placidly and proudly. The world is very good in this oasis, in which bubbles a bright fountain. So, until the hour of dejeuner, the tiny tots disport themselves in the open air, and the mothers knit.

+ + + In the evening by the Lion de Belfort a man pushing a little truck halts. He takes off his coat, disclosing a muscular torso and strong arms. He spreads on the ground a piece of carpet. Upon it he places great weights and huge dumb-bells. Idlers pause to watch these preparations. No word is spoken. He lifts aloft weight after weight. The onlookers applaud. They are not content merely to applaud—they fling upon the tapis small coins of the realm Sandow in all his glory never worked harder than this

THERE is a crowd at a street corner near the busy | Hercules of the sidewalk. He is a distinctive feature of the city. His performance pleases, and though he earns a bare living by his quotidian feats, it is a performance that could fittingly be compared with those of the regular stage. When it is over, he rolls up his carpet, wheels away his truck, and goes in search of fresh triumphs.

+ + + A dozen goats perambulate leisurely. The herdsman with his long baton pays no attention to them. A fat dog ambles along the edge of the pavement apparently unconcerned. His business is to keep the goats from straying into the roadway among the automobiles. But his job is a

The goats are accustomed to these town peregrinations and they remain on safe ground. A shopkeeper runs out with bits of stale bread. Instantly the goats cluster round her. The more eager animals place their forefeet on her apron. She laughs and distributes her manna.

The herdsman calls to his goats and they follow him again. Soon they range themselves at a convenient corner to be milked. Jugs are brought out from the houses and are filled. We are told that the exigencies of the city will soon drive the goats from Paris. Let us hope this judgment will be long suspended. It is a pleasant sight to see these goats. It is a pleasant sound that the herdsman makes when he blows his bucolic pipes.

It is a holiday and the subsidized theaters are to give a free entertainment. Here is a charming tradition which nobody dreams of disturbing. But to obtain admission it is necessary to line up in long rows well beforehand. So now we observe the Parisians in queues under the arcades of the Comédie-Française. A wooden barricade keeps them

It is not only poor people who avail themselves of this gratuitous matinée. Indeed, most of the theater-goers on this holiday are apparently comfortably off. They are well dressed. They belong, one would say, to the lower bourgeois classes. There are students, too, among them, glad of the opportunity to witness the classical repertory. They have brought with them, to beguile the hours of waiting, folding chairs, books, and packets of sandwiches.

Now the doors are about to open. A thrill passes along the whole line. Sandwiches are hastily pocketed, books are carefully marked, folding chairs are taken up. The queue is all attention. There is eagerness, but there is no pushing. One by one the would-be spectators enter. Let us hope that before the doors are closed the last person in the long line will have entered and that nobody will be turned away disappointed.

Under the old walls of Montmartre children are dancing. This is not the Montmartre of cosmopolitan pleasure. It is the old-world village perched on the hill. It is La Butte. There are the seemingly interminable stone steps which lead to the Sacré-Cœur, that white Oriental monument whose rotundities dominate the capital and can be seen from every point of the city. Ancient streets, narrow, ortuous, swarm with girls and boys intent on play

They are the girls and boys that Poulbot, the French artist, has so happily depicted. They are care-free, they are rosy, they are merry. They join hands, a score of them, and they dance a French version of "Ring-a-Ringof-Roses." As they dance they sing. They sing the old ongs of France which each generation of children learns

"Dansons la Capucine" (Let us dance the Capucine), they sing, and then "Nous n'irons plus au bois—Les lauriers sont coupes" (We will go no more to the woods-The laurel trees have been cut down), and so on. Next they dance and sing the favorite song and dance of French children:

Sur le pont d'Avignon, L'on y danse, l'on y danse, Sur le pont d'Avignon.

[On the bridge of Avignon, There they dance, there they dance, On the bridge of Avignon, There they dance round and round.]

From the World's Great Capitals—Berlin

PECENTLY, during what is known as Dürer Week, all Germany honored the memory of its great artist, Dürer. The exhibition at the Prussian Academy attracted hundreds of visitors daily, although the great center of celebration is Nuremberg, Dürer's birthplace. His picture, "Das Rosenkranzfest, considered by many experts to be his best, was shown at the exhibition there. The convent of Strahow, near Prague, whose property it is, being in need of funds, has decided to sell it. The price desired, however, appears prohibitive for many; while not definitely stated it is believed to be approximately 5,000,000 marks. Dr. von Bode, the famous art expert and head of the Berlin museums, has expressed a strong desire to obtain the painting for the Kaiser Friedrich Museum at Berlin, but says it would be impossible to raise sufficient funds even if the museum exchanged the "Madonna von Glatz" in part payment.

The "Rosenkranzfest," which is dated 1506, was the result of five months' steady work by Dürer. It has an interesting history. Originally intended for the St. Bartholomew Church at Venice, it was purchased by the Emperor Rudolf II, who had it carried by four men all the way to Prague that it might not suffer in transport. In 1631 the picture was conveyed to Vienna, but was so damaged by careless packing that it was cast into the archives as "completely spoilt," and in 1793 it was sold to the Strahow Convent for 22 ducats. A Prague artist who was commissioned to restore it, painted over the original madonna the portrait of his daughter. The two replicas of the picture-one in the Court Museum at Vienna, the other in the United States-are in their original condition.

In a recent semipublic address the Reichs Minister for Foreign Affairs, Dr. Stresemann, alluded seriously, albeit with the humor habitual to him in less strictly political speeches, to the twenty-four hours' clock which the authorities would fain introduce on all occasions. Dr. Stresemann conceded the point as regards an international railway time-table, "if absolutely necessary," but laughed at the thought of postal and other authorities adopting it. + +

One of the now almost obsolete Berlin horse-droshkys has covered itself with glory by the undertaking of a journey to Paris and back in the nature of a swan song. It came about in the following manner: last summer a Frenchwoman traveled on horseback alone from Paris to Berlin, via Belgium and Holland, Passing through Wannsee—the beautiful lake suburb of Berlin—where this particular driver was patiently waiting for a fare, she exchanged a few cordial words with him. The man conceived the adventurous idea of following her example, but with his modest droshky drawn by his old four-footed friend. By April 1 all was ready for the start, and uninitiated people thought it all a capital April joke. A big poster on the right and left of the open vehicle and one in the rear bore the inscription "Berlin-Paris," and French and German flags waved gayly from the box on which sat proudly the driver in the traditional white varnished top hat. "Whether I wait here for fares or risk a long journey is all the same; our occupation is at an end anyway," our hero declared to the inevitable interviewer.

Thus he started on the great adventure. His route will be, if all goes well, Braunschweig-Hanover-Cologne-Metz-Nancy-Paris; he intends doing twenty miles a day and expects to be home again in August or September. He has with him a hundredweight of oats for his Rosenante and trusts to pay for their nights' lodgings by the sale of picture post cards of the equipage, containing a brief description in German and French. These cards explain that he is the oldest droshky driver in Wannsee, and the founder of the Wannsee droshky rank; that this is his last tour, as horse-cabs are now nearly extinct. He has provided himself with 10,000 of these cards, which shows how systematically he has gone to work. At the French Consulate, when he applied for his passport, he was met with the utmost cordiality and was wished "bon voyage."

4 4 4 The comprehensive alterations of the State Opera House n Unter den Linden may now be considered finished; final touches in the matter of beautifying the interior and exterior of the building are occupying a small army of workmen, so that all may be in readiness for the opening on April 29. The building has been greatly enlarged by the new wings on either side, much to the detriment of its general appearance; it is but a patched-up affair at enormous cost and will never in the least vie with the opera houses of Dresden, Frankfurt or Munich. Many competent judges are still of the opinion that the plan of the ex-Kaiser to erect an entirely new building was much to be preferred. For the opening night a performance of "Die Meistersinger" has been selected and the demand for tickets is already great, all the cheaper seats -those of the third and fourth circle-having been disposed of some weeks ago. *** * ***

After years of deliberation it has finally been decided by the authorities concerned to build a funicular railway to the summit of the Zugspitze, the highest mountain in the bleak, rocky Watterstein range between Bayaria and the Tyrol. The Zugspitze has an altitude of 9725 feet, and owing to its steep and rugged sides is considered one of the most dangerous ascents for even experienced mountaineers. The railway has long been desired, as the view from the top is said to be magnificent, but the Bavarian Ministry of Works has not hitherto yielded owing to the expense of the undertaking. Once settled, the plan is to be carried out with due expediency. The work, which has been intrusted to two important companies in Berlin and one in Munich, will be commenced immediately. As far as Platt-about three-quarters of the distance-a cogwheel track will be in operation; thence to the summit a cable funicular will be driven by electricity. At Platt, where the change will be made, an inn with station restaurant is to be erected.

Pleased With Daily Features

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

What a blessing the postman brings to our home each day in the Monitor! I am so pleased with the "Daily Features" section. The "Word a Day" is interesting, helpful and just straight fun. Our six-year-old loves the Sundial quite as much as the Children's Page and he and I find ourselves looking for sunny-hour experiences in ourselves and in others. ourselves and in others.

The Christian Science Monitor is a bearer of good news, interestingly and ably told, and well-informed and up to date is he who is a daily and consistent reader of this paper. (Mrs.) NANETTE N. MELVIN.
